Baden bei Wien – the perfect place for a perfect convention!

Situated 26 kilometres south of Vienna, in the heart of the wine-growing Thermenregion (literally: Thermal Region) in the Vienna Woods, the elegant city of Baden is a wonderful events venue, enticing the visitor with ideal facilities for conventions, conferences, and seminars. First-class accommodation, cultural and culinary delights, gaming and excitement at the Casino or the historic harness races, and the modern wellness oases provide the perfect framework.

Many a person enjoying a stroll through the city has encountered the Kaiser. Or at least, that's how it felt that way at the time. Magnificent edifices from the Biedermeier era, such as the StadtTheatre-style Baden and the Sommerarena with its retractable glass roof, as well as smaller buildings, such as the one in which Beethoven composed his 9th symphony, the „Kaiserhaus“, or the Arnulf Rainer Museum, are available as venues for incentive events.

Baden benefits from its quiet location in green nature, from its excellent convention centres and hotels, and from creativity in the designing of incentive programmes. In addition, it is advantageously close to Vienna.

It takes only 40 minutes to reach Vienna from Baden by car or bus, and 25 minutes by train, while the Baden-Vienna tram service runs every 15 minutes, taking just 60 minutes to arrive directly outside the Wiener Staatsoper. Baden also enjoys excellent international transport connections. Vienna International Airport is just 33 kilometres away, and connected directly to Baden bei Wien via the S1 train line.

The Arnulf Rainer Museum combines an architectural gem with the work of the world-renowned contemporary artist. The clear layout of the Frauenbad (“women’s spa”) building, which dates from 1821 and whose origins have been documented as far back as the Roman era, is based on a design by Charles de Moreau, one of the leading architects of the French neoclassical style.

After being decommissioned as a spa, the building was opened to the public again in 1977 as a national exhibition centre with a retrospective of Arnulf Rainer’s work.

Following state-of-the-art and aesthetically exceptional renovation work by the architects Lottersberger-Messner-Dumpelnik, the Arnulf Rainer Museum was formally opened in 2009. The artist was born in Baden in 1929, and the city of Baden, in collaboration with the state of Lower Austria, has dedicated an institution to him that showcases his complex oeuvre in exquisite monographic and thematic exhibitions.

With its three performance venues – the Stadttheater, the Max-Reinhardt Foyer, and the Sommerarena – Bühne Baden is the backbone of Baden’s vibrant cultural scene. The traditional spa city has always placed great importance on culture – the roots of the Stadttheater Baden date back to the 18th century!

The Stadttheater received its splendid present-day appearance in 1909. Alongside productions from all genres of culture, it was and still is the venue for numerous large events such as awards ceremonies, product presentations, and film recordings.

Since September 2010, the Max-Reinhardt Foyer, which offers nearly 100 seats, has also been available for smaller events. And in the summer months, Bühne Baden’s Sommerarena can also be hired as an event location. The retractable glass roof allows for unique events under the stars, and, if necessary, provides protection against rain.

In 1338, Duke Otto the Merry presented the Carthusian monks of Gaming with a present fit for a king: He gifted them his “Badener Berghof” and all its lands. One key part of this gift was the Badenerberg vineyards. The forest-covered hill on which we now stand, and which adjoins the vineyards, was also included. To this day, its name is the Gamin-gerberg. When the municipality of Baden built a forest inn here in 1881, its intended name was the historicising “Berghof”. But then came the wedding between Crown Prince Rudolf and the Archduchess Stephanie. In the blink of an eye, the Berghof became the Rudolfshof. Once again, the city of Baden had done honour to its nickname “Schwarz-gelbowitz” (“Black-and-Yellow-Ville”, after the colours of the House of Hapsburg).

The seminar room is on the 1st floor of the building, and features 2 roofed terraces and a balcony. It is possible to use sun-blinds to protect the south-facing windows against direct sunlight.

Opposite the Franzensbad spa stands the former „Johannesbad“ spa, which is also how the adjacent Johannessgasse got its name. Around 1672, the source of this spa was located on an island in the river Schwechat, which was still unregulated at that time.

The bed of this stream reached up to about where the Johannessgasse stands today. In 1776, it was listed as an „Armenbad“ („paupers' spa“) owned by the lords of Rauhenstein. Following renovation work in 1847 and 1885, the building received its current appearance in 1909. In 1925, the municipality purchased this spa complex and opened a sanatorium here in 1949.

When the new spa centre opened in 1979, the „Johannesbad“ sanatorium was closed down. A renovation project in the early Eighties resulted in a multi-purpose building called the „Kreativzentrum“. Exhibition rooms and halls for various events were built.

In the early Eighties, this developed into the Theater am Steg, with a regular events programme. In recent years, the Baden Office for Culture has filled a niche in the market by catering to the ever-growing numbers of fans of the performing arts with events such as concerts, cabaret evenings, readings, theatre performances, children's theatre and much more.

Harness racing in Baden bei Wien – experience one of Europe’s most beautiful summer race tracks

The Badener Trabrennverein (Baden Harness Racing Association) is one of Austria's oldest and most traditional harness racing associations.

What makes Baden’s harness-racing track so special is that the seats are situated very close to the race track, so that the public get to see the horses and racers up close. This is especially the case in the VIP boxes, which can be hired for exclusive use.

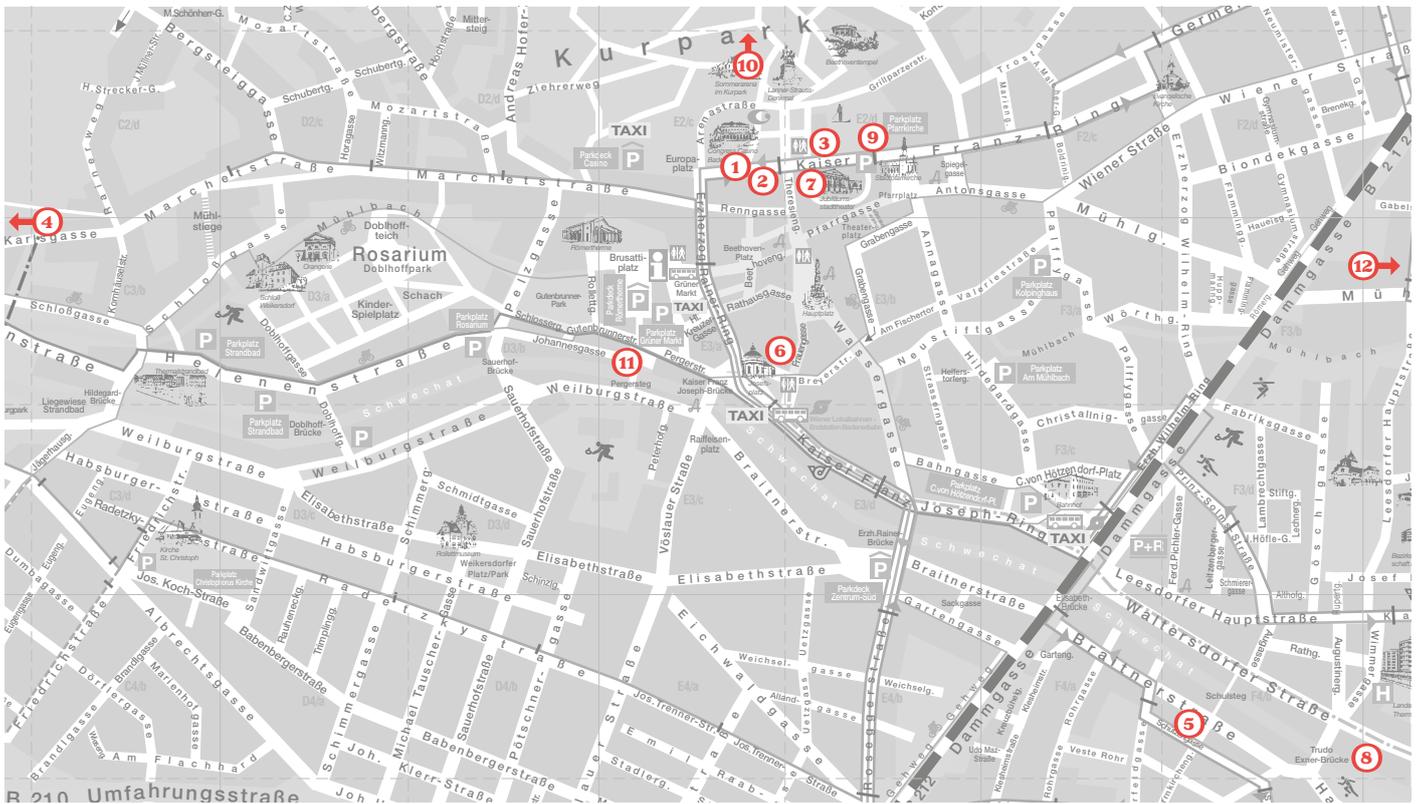

Four separate restaurants leave nothing to be desired in terms of food & drinks!

From July to September, the harness racing track is the scene of popular races, with around 50,000 visitors per racing season.

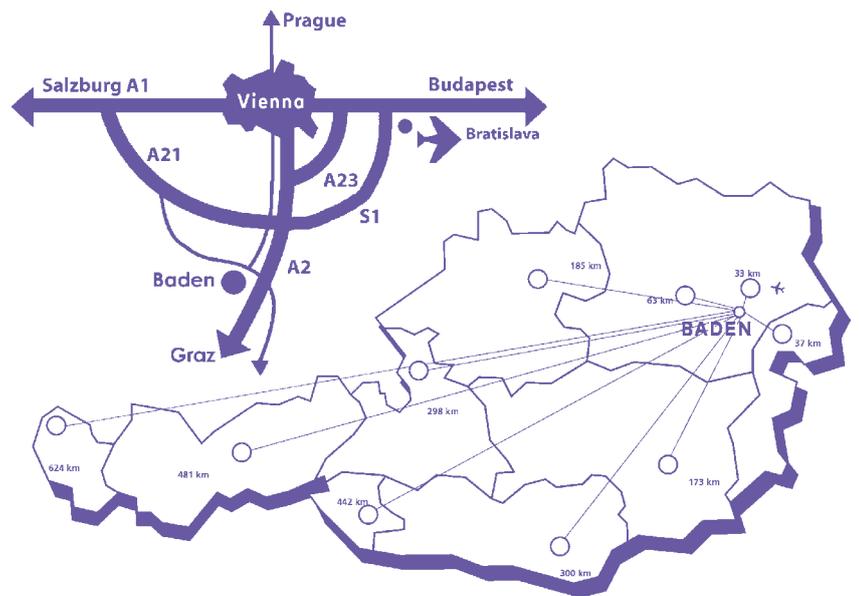

The following events can be held at the harness-racing track from April to October
